—Ralf & Pat

Dear Ralf and Pat,

I have been a DAREDEVIL fan ever since the classic "Battle of the Baxter Building" storyline from FANTASTIC FOUR #40, but having been disappointed by DAREDEVIL #301 and #302, I strayed from the flock this past year. Well, Monday I picked up DD #312, and, man, was it hot!

Mr. McDaniel's work is new to me, but I have already begun searching out his previous contributions. His art is alive and exciting, dangerous and risky, dark and colorful; elements which complement DAREDEVIL's tone and mood deliciously.

One of the most rewarding aspects of reading comics is seeing the development and growth of talent in artists. Some illustrators reach a level of steady competence, and remain there for years, while others are able to achieve a personal breakthrough and raise their expressiveness to new heights of beauty and insight for all to enjoy.

This same development is evident in just the few back issues of DAREDEVIL I found on Friday. From the enjoyable horseback sequence in DD #308, to the absolute intensity of the dramatic opening act of DD #312, the level of talent and imagination has increased exponentially.

When a book's popularity wanes, it seems the creative team is given more leeway then when its sales are high. I hope the current team is given free rein on DAREDEVIL for some time to come.

I like what they are doing!

We like what they are doing too, Gregory! In fact, way back when we were first searching for a new DD artist, Scott appealed to us because we saw the incredible potential Scott had for artistic development. We think he gets more inventive with every issue!!!

Dear Ralph and Pat,

Oh man, oh man, oh man. This is great! What D.G. and Scott have done to DAREDEVIL has completely changed my mind about him. They have taken this once (dare I say it) dull comic book character and have unleashed his darker side of justice. He is now more like the Punisher (a man he really doesn't like), rather than the goody-two-shoes he used to be. Everything has improved greatly in the last twenty issues, from the plot, to the art, and even the inking is much better.

I like the way Daredevil now treats the low down scum of the streets like Vitaeo Vincenzo and Charley Garzon. The threats and the actual violence that he portrays will gain him more respect than he ever had before. I love it. Don't you dare change a thing! Maybe next time when Daredevil and Punisher meet, Punisher will have a little more respect for the man in red. One quick question though, will we ever see Elektra again? I mean, Frank Miller just seemed to want her to never stay dead. Will she be seen again in a DAREDEVIL comic? I mean, if you can bring back Iron Fist, surely you could find a way to bring back Elektra.

So until DD changes his costume to pink with orange horns, Make Mine Marvel!!!

Rich Caroll

In the letters page of PUNISHER WAR JOURNAL #50, all the letters were asking when was the next time DD and Punisher were going to be seen together again. If Matt Murdock had his druthers, it would be never. Daredevil is not the Punisher. He has always had the rough street-wise side to his tactics, Rich, maybe we just haven't shown you enough of that recently. But Daredevil does not kill his enemies. Remember, this is the same man who offered the Kingpin—the man who nearly destroyed Matt's life—forgiveness. That seems to be a far cry from the Punisher's tactics, wouldn't you agree?

One of the most frequently asked questions in our letters pages is, of course, "When are we going to see Elektra again?" Well, as of this issue, you saw her! Now that may not be what you had in mind, Rich, but maybe it's a premonition of things to come!?!

Dear Devil's Advocate,

I just put down DAREDEVIL #312, and it was a great story with a great plot. I still, however, personally believe that DAREDEVIL #304 is the greatest issue since DD reached the plateau of 300 issues. My reasons are that DD didn't have to battle any super villains, he just wanted to save a few lives for however long he could. He cared for people he didn't even know, and he put his life on the line for everyone's safety. I especially thought that the end was so incredible, only Daredevil could have done it! Amazing!!!

Now back to the recent stuff. I love the new layout on those pages. It has such an unconventional style. I especially love the way DD is being portrayed. The inner fights he has with himself show that he is human. I always felt that the greatest attribute of Daredevil is the fact that he really has no super powers. I understand that has heightened senses portray him as having powers, but when he was a kid, all he did was train himself in order to use these senses to the best of his ability—something anyone could achieve even without heightened senses! He put himself to the task of building body strength and dexterity, along with the quickest reflexes on Earth. I hope DD #313 continues this amazing saga that has begun with the same quality that I found in issue #312. Keep up the great work with the "Greatest Hero of All Time!!!"

(Address withheld by request)

It's odd that you should bring up issue #304, Eric, because we've been dying to let our fans in on a few facts about issue #316. Issue #316 is going to be the "associated sequel" to the highly acclaimed issue #304. Penciller Kevin Kobasic will be filling in for Scott McDaniel during this one issue so that Scott will be able to bring you the next chapter in the Calypso saga (see DAREDEVIL ANNUAL #9!). Kevin's work has appeared in the NAM, AVENGERS, THOR, DEATHLOK, THE PUNISHER titles, and various other projects. In fact, we're so happy to have him aboard for this very special issue, we're going to let him create a mixed-media cover for issue #316. We'd love to show it to you, but we want everyone to be surprised!

Next Issue: If youze haven't been spreadin' de word 'bout Mr. McD yet, den dis next issue is da one ta bark 'bout! Scott and Bud are goin' to go all out wit' pages of art dat no one could ev'r ignore!! DD and Shock go 'ead to 'ead in a story we could only call—SHOCK THERAPY!!!
See youz in thirty!!!!!
